

Evaluation of representative species' Landscape Capability models

University of Maine, Maine Coop Unit, West Virginia University

OBJECTIVES

1. Test for relationships between abundance of representative species and DSL Landscape Capability
2. Evaluate relationships between predictions of representative species models and the species they represent
3. Provide information to managers regarding relationships of forestbird species populations and forest structure and landscape conditions

Locations of point counts for use in validating Designing sustainable Landscapes Landscape Capability (LC) Models

